1. Application of the Ombudsman’s Code of Ethics and Conduct (Code)

The Code applies to the following people, who are referred to in this Code as ‘officers’:

- ongoing, temporary and casual employees of the Ombudsman’s Office (office), and employees on secondment to the office
- statutory officers appointed under the Ombudsman Act 1974
- contractors and agency staff engaged to perform work for or on behalf of the office
- students, interns and volunteers engaged with the office for the purposes of work experience or in any other capacity, and
- consultants and others the office has a business relationship with whose engagement requires adherence to the Code.

The Code applies at all times when performing your work duties and in your working relations with colleagues, clients and customers, stakeholders and the government of the day.

Some aspects of the Code also apply outside your working relations and performance of work duties. For example, your obligations relating to Public Comment, Professional behaviour, Self-reporting, Child protection and other reporting extend beyond work hours and work relations and will apply to how you conduct yourself in other settings because of the effect that that conduct may have on the office.

Your obligations under the Code are in addition to your legislative, industrial and administrative obligations, as well as other office policies and any lawful directions given to you in the course of performing your duties.

A breach of this Code may constitute misconduct, which is dealt with in accordance with the Ombudsman’s Dealing with allegations of misconduct policy.

2. What this Code covers

- NSW government and Ombudsman values
- Conflicts – private interests and public duties
- Gifts and benefits
- Secondary employment \(including voluntary work\)
- Use of office resources
- Participation in political, community and union or professional association activities
- Professional behaviour
- Self-reporting obligations
- Reporting obligations
- Roles and responsibilities

There are links in the Code to related Ombudsman policies that officers are required to be aware of and comply with.

3. Code of Ethics and Conduct for NSW Government Sector Employees (NSW PSC Code)

In addition to compliance with the Ombudsman’s Code, officers are also required to comply with the ‘Code of Ethics and Conduct for NSW Government Sector Employees’ issued by the Public Service Commissioner (PSC Code).

4. NSW government and Ombudsman values

As an Ombudsman officer and a public servant, you are required to exercise your functions in accordance with both the values of the office and the values of the NSW government sector.

The Ombudsman office values are below:

Integrity	We act lawfully, honestly, ethically and are committed to producing high-quality work in a consistent manner.
Impartiality	We operate independently from government and act in a non-partisan manner, providing services informed by evidence to advocate for the public interest.
Fairness	We strive to ensure people are treated fairly and reasonably by the government agencies with which they interact. We treat complainants and the employees of the agencies whose conduct we investigate fairly.
Transparency	We document our operations and processes and communicate openly with our stakeholders and provide key information about the findings, recommendations and outcomes of our work.
Professionalism	We work with government agencies and non- government organisations through relationships based on professionalism, trust and respect to find proactive and positive resolutions in the interest of the people and communities of NSW. We interact with the public and external stakeholders to understand their diverse contexts and emerging needs.
Respect	We work with complainants, stakeholders and our colleagues in an inclusive manner, treating them with dignity and respect, and mindful of diversity.

The NSW Public Service Commission Code of Ethics and Conduct, set out the NSW government core values of integrity, trust, service and accountability.

Integrity	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Consider people equally without prejudice or favour • Act professionally with honesty, consistency and impartiality • Take responsibility for situations, showing leadership and courage
Trust	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Place the public interest over personal interest. • Appreciate difference and welcome learning from others • Build relationships based on mutual respect • Uphold the law, institutions of government and democratic principles • Communicate intentions clearly and invite teamwork and collaboration • Provide apolitical and non-partisan advice.
Service	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide services fairly with a focus on customer needs • Be flexible, innovative and reliable in service delivery • Engage with the not-for-profit and business sectors to develop and implement service solutions • Focus on quality while maximising service delivery.
Accountability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Recruit and promote employees on merit • Take responsibility for decisions and actions • Provide transparency to enable public scrutiny • Observe standards for safety • Be fiscally responsible and focus on efficient, effective and prudent use of resources.

5. Conflicts – private interests and public duties

5.1 Your obligation

You must take all necessary steps to manage any conflict between your public duty and your private interests:

- that actually arises
- that a reasonable person may perceive, or
- that might arise in future.

This is crucial to maintaining the office’s reputation for impartiality and objectivity, and ensuring that we act in the public interest.

5.2 What is a conflict?

Conflicts may be actual, perceived or potential.

An actual conflict arises where you have a private interest that could influence your exercise of your public duties as an officer.

Example

you are on a recruitment panel and you realise that one of the applicants for the role is a friend.

A perceived conflict arises where a reasonable, informed observer would perceive that your private interest could influence your exercise of public duties as an officer.

Example

you join the Ombudsman's investigations and major projects unit, having left a role with another NSW public authority responsible for delivery of a particular project or function. The Ombudsman has just commenced an investigation into the conduct of that public authority in relation to that particular project or function. You would not be permitted to work on that investigation or have access to investigation documents or information

A potential conflict arises where it is foreseeable that, at a future time, your private interest could give rise to either an actual or perceived conflict with your public duties as an officer.

Example

you work in Complaints and Resolution and a member of your household tells you they have accepted a job in a public authority that the Ombudsman overlooks. There may be a potential conflict here if, in future, you were to be assigned to work on certain matters involving that public authority, or if you had access to information about work being done by others that involved that authority.

5.3 What is a private interest?

A private interest is an interest held by you or by:

- any member of your family or household,
- a friend, or
- a business, social or community associate.

The interest may be material (involving money or other tangible benefit) or non-material (such as reputational).

Private interests can arise from personal, social or work relationships, memberships, work or educational history, property ownership, political affiliations, religious beliefs or experiences and activities involving particular individuals or organisations.

The chances of a conflict arising, and the type of conflict that might arise, may depend on the nature of your public duty as an Ombudsman officer. Someone working in a corporate area may face different types of conflicts to someone working on complaint-handling or investigations.

5.4 Complying with your obligation to manage conflicts

You are personally responsible for managing actual, perceived and potential conflicts.

To help you do this, you will be prompted to consider conflicts at different stages of your employment with the Ombudsman (see below). However, you have an ongoing obligation at all times to consider and respond to the risk of conflicts between your private interests and your public duties.

Do not assume that the office is aware of any interest you have just because you have mentioned it in your job application, during recruitment or in a conversation with your manager or supervisor. All interests that you believe raise a conflict (actual, perceived or potential) must be declared.

If you are ever in doubt, talk to your manager or contact Governance and Risk. It's always better to ask than to assume that you do not need to declare anything.

Below are circumstances where you must provide a Declaration of Interests.

Before starting with the Ombudsman

You must make a Declaration of Interests before starting with the Ombudsman.

A Declaration of Interests sets out any private interests you have that may give rise to potential conflicts. The purpose of making this declaration is so that you and the office can be alive to, and where necessary put in place actions, to avoid an actual or perceived conflict arising in the future. For example, if you declare that a member of your family or household works for a public authority oversighted by the Ombudsman, we may consider excluding you from any work or information that involves the relevant part of the authority.

When your relevant private interests change

You must provide an updated Declaration of Interests at any time, if their relevant private circumstances changes.

For example, if you enter into a close personal relationship with someone who works for an entity the Ombudsman oversees, or a member of your family or household gets a new job with an entity the Ombudsman oversees, you may need to update your declaration.

Annually (Executive only)

Executive members must complete an updated Declaration of interests on an annual basis.

When prompted by your participation on a recruitment panel, procurement panel, investigation or other work task

You must complete a Declaration of Interests if and when they become aware that something you are about to undertake has an association with a private interest. This can happen in a range of circumstances, including

- a change in your role in the office
- your participation on a procurement or recruitment panel
- your involvement in dealing with a new complaint or disclosure
- your allocation to a new investigation or major project

NOTE: You must complete this Declaration even though you have previously prepared a Declaration in other circumstances. Do not assume that having declared a private interest when you started employment with the Ombudsman means you are not required to make a new Declaration when, for example, your role changes or you start working on a new investigation or major project. You are responsible for identifying and promptly reporting private interests in accordance with the requirements above, and manage any actual or perceived conflict in accordance with advice you receive.

5.5 Using your position to obtain a benefit or advantage related to a private interest

Part of your obligation to manage conflicts between private interests and your public duty involves avoiding any use of your association with the Ombudsman to obtain a benefit or advantage related to a private interest. For example, use of your office email or signature block in circumstances where you are communicating with a public or private entity in your personal capacity may be perceived as an attempt to use your position at the office to obtain a benefit or advantage or influence an outcome.

Note also that, under Ombudsman Act s37 it is an offence for any person, where they are not engaged in Ombudsman functions, to represent that they are so engaged.

5.6 Conflicts and other registers kept by Governance and Risk Unit

These declarations are held by Governance and Risk, along with secondary employment approvals and gifts and benefits information, on a central register.

The register can only be accessed by the Ombudsman, Chief Operating Officer, Chief Deputy Ombudsman, Legal Counsel, Governance and Risk, and People and Culture. However:

1. Executive members and managers may, on request, be provided with reports of conflicts of interests pertaining to officers in their management line
2. all managers have access to a list of names of officers who have conflicts, but not any details about those conflicts (to ensure managers know whether they need to make inquiries about officers they supervise), and
3. de-identified statistical reports may be provided to the Ombudsman and Executive for the purposes of ensuring visibility and effective management of risks.

6. Gifts and benefits

6.1 Gifts and benefits offered to you

A gift or benefit is:

- a. any item, service, prize, ticket, voucher, cheque or money order, debit card, pre-paid card, meal, hospitality, travel or accommodation upgrade, in cash or non-cash form
- b. provided by an entity the office oversees or by a complainant, client, applicant, supplier or potential supplier to or of the office
- c. which has an intrinsic value to you, a member of your household, relative, friend or associate.

6.2 Soliciting gifts and benefits

You must never seek or solicit any gift, benefit or hospitality in your capacity as an officer.

You must not arrange for or induce a member of your household, relative, friend or associate to solicit or accept a gift, benefit or hospitality.

6.3 Being offered a gift or benefit

The action you must take upon being offered a gift or benefit will depend on the value of the gift or benefit and the circumstances in which it is offered. To work out what you should do in a given circumstance, use the flowchart.

When a gift or benefit cannot be accepted, it should be politely declined at the time of offer. You should explain that it is contrary to office policy to accept.

6.4 Reporting bribes or attempted bribes

If you are offered a gift, benefit or hospitality and believe the intention of the person was to influence the way you or the office performs a duty, or that might otherwise be considered a bribe, you must refuse the offer, even if the gift, benefit or hospitality would otherwise be acceptable.

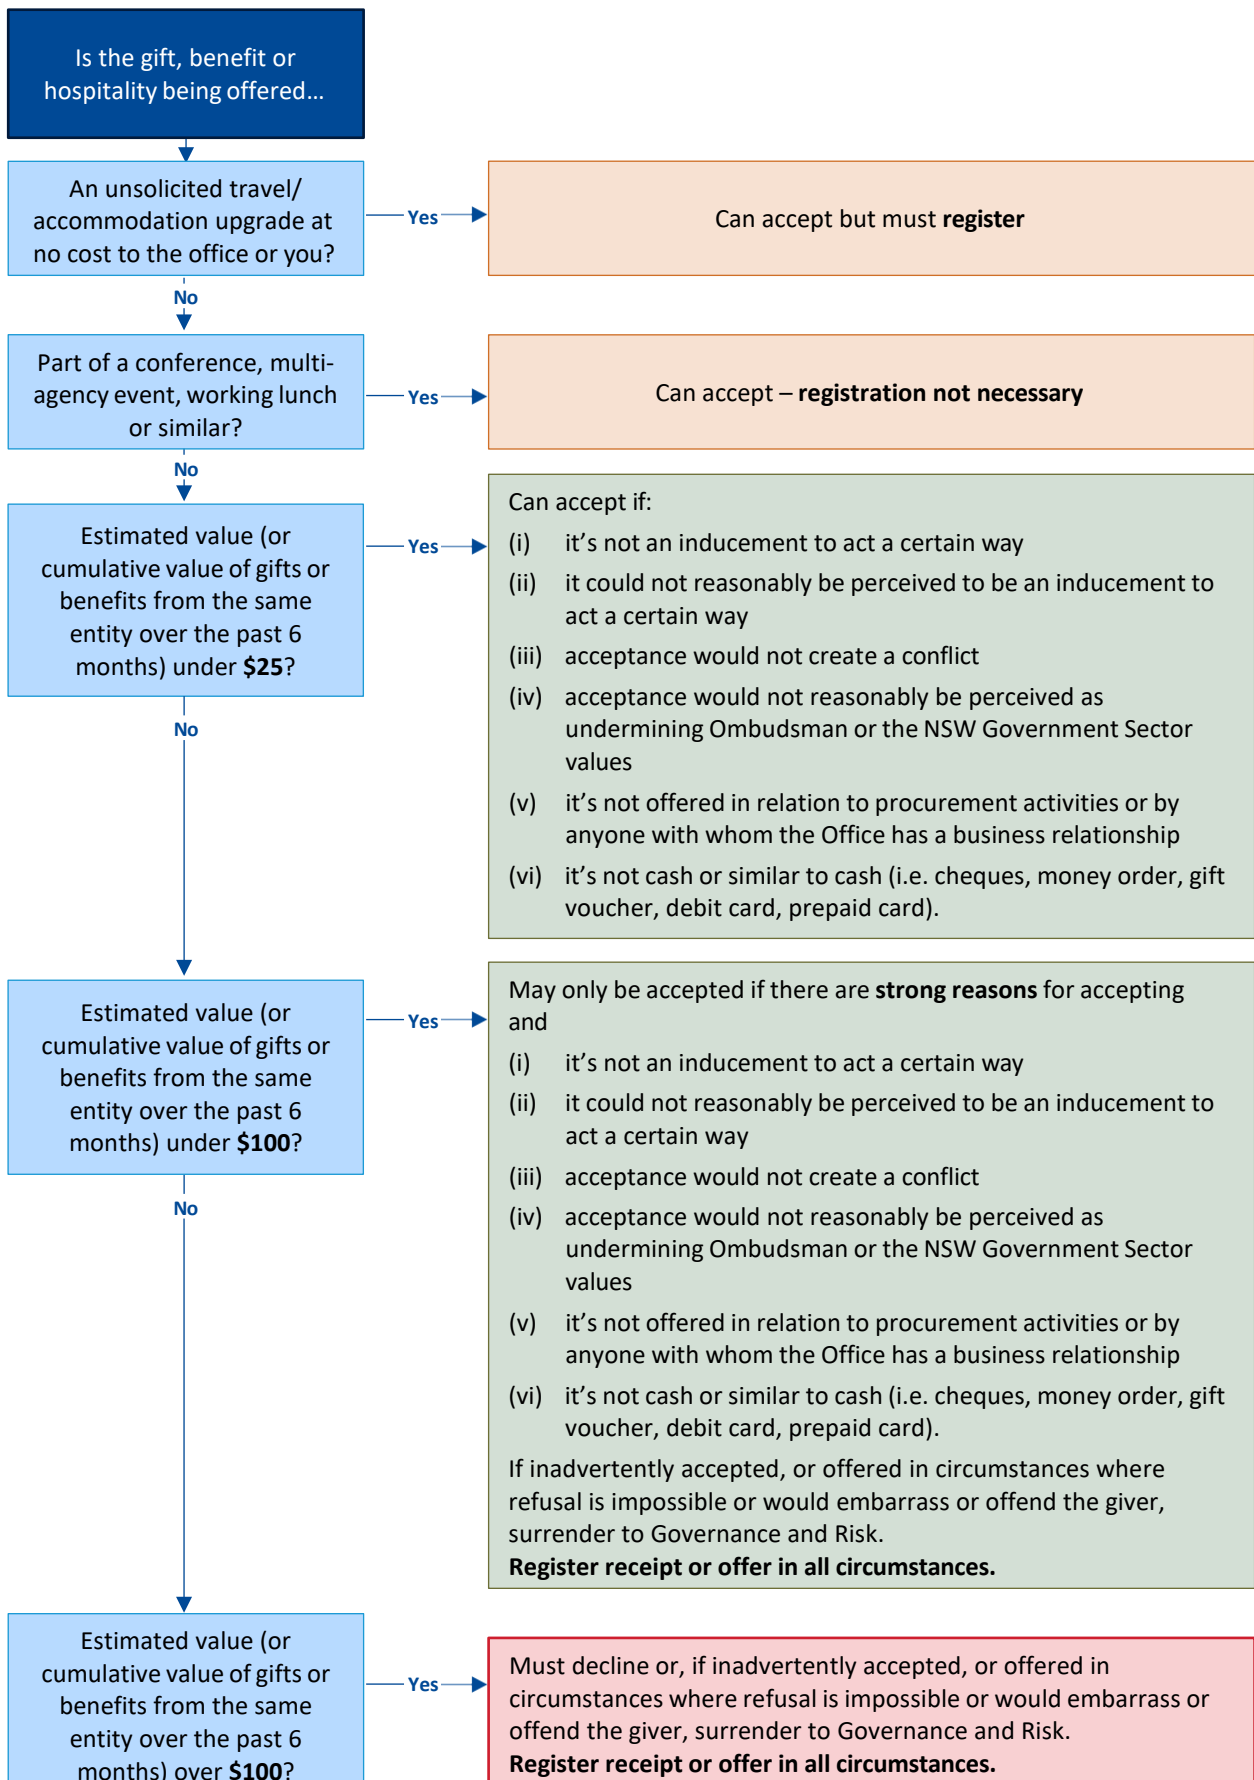

Any attempt to bribe an officer, or acceptance of a bribe, is corrupt conduct, may also constitute a criminal offence, and must be reported immediately to a member of the Executive.

6.5 Inadvertent acceptance of a gift or benefit

Occasionally a gift or benefit may be inadvertently accepted, such as a card which following receipt is found to contain a gift voucher or money, or a wrapped gift not opened in front of the giver. Inadvertent acceptance of a prohibited gift or benefit in good faith will not be a breach of the Code provided you immediately act in accordance with the management process set out below.

If an accepted gift is found to be prohibited, it must be immediately declared and advice sought from an Executive member as to the appropriate disposal. If not prohibited, the gift or benefit must be managed in accordance with the Code.

6.6 Gifts and benefits flowchart

6.7 Registration of gifts and benefits

You must declare any gift or benefit that is required to be declared under this Code as soon as practical by completing the declaration form and providing to your manager. If the gift or benefit was accepted, the manager must complete the relevant section regarding how it will be disposed.

Once complete, this form must be emailed to Governance and Risk who will review the approved action for compliance with the Code and update the Gifts and Benefits Register. This register may only be accessed by the Ombudsman, Chief Operating Officer, Chief Deputy Ombudsman, Legal Counsel, and Governance and Risk.

6.8 Disposal of surrendered gifts and benefits

The Chief Operating Officer is responsible for determining appropriate disposal of gifts or benefits which have been surrendered to Governance and Risk in accordance with the Code.

In the case of perishable items such as chocolates or food hampers, an appropriate method of disposal may be to share the item among staff or donate to charity. Where the gift will be shared among staff physical surrender of the gift to Governance and Risk is not required, but the disposal method must be recorded in the register.

Non-perishable goods are securely stored and an inventory of contents maintained by Governance and Risk. At the end of the financial year a review of the contents is conducted against the inventory. Disposal of the gifts occurs at least once per year and is recorded.

6.9 Hospitality

The gifts and benefits flowchart can also be used to make decisions about offers of hospitality.

Examples of low-risk hospitality, where it will probably be ok to accept, include:

- functions where you attend in an official capacity representing the office, for example a pen or notepad
- hospitality provided as part of a conference package where the office has paid a fee for you to attend, for example tea, coffee or a modest meal
- catered briefings or lunches where invitees from a range of organisations are present
- occasional working lunches, where the hospitality is incidental and of low value.

Examples of higher-risk hospitality, which should not be accepted, include:

- restaurant meals, such as invitations to lunches or dinners to 'seal the deal', or to 'celebrate' finalisation of a procurement process or the signing of a contract
- invitations to corporate boxes or marquees
- invitations to functions held in private homes
- invitations which extend to family members, relations, friends and associates.

If hospitality is accepted in good faith, but a third-party attempts to use the occasion to raise a materially significant matter relating to their business or private affairs, you should politely decline to discuss the matter and, if appropriate, propose that a formal meeting be organised for a later date.

Where a travel or accommodation provider offers a travel or accommodation upgrade for operational reasons, at no charge to you or the office, you may accept the upgrade, but must declare it.

6.10 Offering gifts, benefits and hospitality

We may, on occasion, provide small gifts (including Ombudsman merchandise) or hospitality to external stakeholders. This is permitted when the gift or hospitality:

- is for a business purpose
- is part of a meeting hosted by the Ombudsman's office, work, training or community engagement event
- is proportionate and reasonable in the circumstances
- does not cause – and could not be seen to cause – a conflict of interest
- could not be construed as an inducement to act in a certain way
- is consistent with the government sector core values of integrity, trust, service and accountability
- is purchased through an appropriate process and is documented
- does not provide a benefit to you, members of your family or friends
- is in keeping with the Code.

Generally, hospitality should not be extended to consultants or other providers of goods or services unless authorised by a member of the Executive.

You do not need to declare the appropriate gifting of gifts or hospitality to external stakeholders on the gifts and benefits register. However, you should report to your manager if you believe that another officer has acted in a way that is unethical or a breach of the Code. You can also report suspected cases of fraud and corruption as outlined in the Public Interest Disclosure Policy.

7. Secondary employment (including voluntary work)

The office acknowledges that you may wish to undertake paid or volunteer work, or self-employment, in addition to your employment with the office. In this Code and in the office, 'secondary employment' includes unpaid or volunteer work.

7.1 Approval is required

You must not engage in secondary employment, even while on leave, without prior approval. This is because secondary employment can introduce significant conflict of interests, and may also impact your health and welfare, which might diminish your ability to perform your role or create health and safety risks within the office.

Secondary employment approval applications are made using this form, and, if granted, are for a maximum of 12 months, after which you will be required to renew your application.

7.2 Risks must be managed

Secondary employment will only be approved where conflicts of interests and other risks can be resolved or managed.

When undertaking secondary employment, you are required to manage any conflicts of interest that arise as a result of your secondary employment, which includes advising your supervisor of any new conflicts or any escalation of an existing conflict as soon as you become aware of it.

If, following approval, it becomes apparent that risks are not being effectively managed, approval may be withdrawn. You will be consulted prior to any withdrawal of approval, and will have the opportunity to respond. Where after consultation approval is withdrawn, reasons will be provided in writing. An employee may request the decision to decline an application be reviewed by another member of the Executive team.

If you are supervising an officer who is undertaking secondary employment, you must monitor the officer's work performance to ensure the officer's secondary employment does not adversely affect the proper and efficient performance of their duties, or create a work health or safety risk. If either of these issues arise, you must consider whether secondary employment approval might need to be withdrawn.

8. Use of office resources

You must use office resources efficiently, economically and prudently. This includes:

- ensuring decision making about the use of the resources is reasonable and appropriately authorised
- treating the resources with care and ensuring where appropriate that they are secured against theft or misuse
- not creating a risk or liability for the office in the use of office resources (e.g. by breaching copyright or other intellectual property obligations).

Any use of office resources for private purposes must be minimal, reasonable and in accordance with any other relevant office policies. Office consumables, such as printing paper or stationery, must not be used for secondary employment.

See also the office's Technology and Device Management Policy.

9. Participation in political, community and union or professional association conferences or activities

You must perform your functions in an impartial, politically neutral manner.

You have a right to participate in political and community activities and to pursue private interests, provided that:

- you do so in compliance with the Media Policy and Social Media Policy
- participation does not conflict with your duty as a public servant to perform your duties in a politically neutral manner
- participation does not interfere with office duties, and
- any conflict that arises is declared and dealt with in accordance with this Code.

9.1 Public comment

Public comment is any comment made where it is reasonably expected that it will be seen or heard by members of the public. This includes public comment through open social media accounts. You must not make any comment on behalf of the Ombudsman unless authorised to do so.

As a private individual, you have the right to participate in public debate on political and social issues. However, in doing so, you must comply with the Media Policy and Social Media Policy.

9.2 Union or professional association representatives

If you are elected or nominated as spokesperson for a professional association or union, you are entitled to make public comments in relation to office matters provided it is clear that:

- you are making the comments in your capacity as a representative of the association or union, and
- the comments represent the association or union views, and not necessarily those of the office.

9.3 Lobbyists

Staff must comply with the NSW government Lobbyists Code of Conduct published on the NSW legislation website.

9.4 Public comments at conferences and other events

From time to time, senior executives and other senior staff may be invited to present or speak at events, such as conferences, seminars or networking events, in an official capacity. Events may be initiated or organised by public sector agencies, external not-for-profit membership-based organisations (such as the Institute of Public Administration (IPAA)), or private (or for profit) organisations.

The approval of the Ombudsman (or the Ombudsman's delegate) is required in any circumstance where you are asked to present or speak at an event in your capacity as an Ombudsman officer. This process is in place to ensure that engagements of this kind are consistent with the Ombudsman's strategic plan and the independence and integrity of the office.

Particular caution will be exercised before approving an invitation to present or speak at an event hosted by a for-profit entity. Participation in these events may be inappropriate where the event is designed to:

- give commercial entities special access to government officials (for example, through event sponsorships, hosted roundtables or exhibition booths), or
- generate profit for the hosting entity (whether from ticket sales, advertising, indirect promotional activities or other initiatives).

10. Professional behaviour

10.1 Professional presentation

You are expected to present yourself professionally when performing work functions, which includes:

- maintaining a clean, neat and tidy appearance
- dressing appropriately to your duties, particularly when attending external meetings, hearings, presentations or other activities which involve engaging in person with external stakeholders including the public, and
- not wearing clothing or attire that might reasonably be seen to be offensive to colleagues or external stakeholders.

10.2 Use of alcohol and drugs

You must not consume any alcohol or take any drugs (other than as prescribed for you) while on duty. You are otherwise responsible for ensuring that your capacity to perform your duties, and the health and safety of others, is not impaired by the use of alcohol or drugs.

You are encouraged to confidentially disclose any substance-related problems you may be experiencing so that appropriate action can be taken to support you and maintain a safe workplace. You may access counselling support from the Employee Assistance Provider.

10.3 Working with others

We are all required to treat colleagues, customers, clients internal and external stakeholders with dignity and respect, and in accordance with the Ombudsman values and NSW government core values.

You are also required to comply with the office's Bullying, Harassment and Discrimination Policy and Grievance Management Policy.

10.4 Personal conduct at work-related internal and external social functions

The obligations set out under working with others apply also when you are attending social functions related to work such as internal or external end of year parties, farewells or celebrations where it would be evident to others that the function is related to the office, whether these are held within the office or in a public location.

Even if you are not performing official duties on these occasions, you have a duty to treat colleagues and others with dignity and respect.

10.5 Close personal relationships

A close personal relationship includes family relationships, whether by marriage or law, relationships beyond the bounds of mere friendship (such as romantic or sexual relationships), and relationships involving financial dependence or support.

Close personal relationships which exist or arise in the course of the office's work can involve or create an actual, potential or perceived imbalance of power or influence, or a conflict of interest between the parties.

They may also make it difficult to maintain the boundaries of professional and personal life and can cause serious difficulties and disruption in the work environment for colleagues.

For these reasons:

- All close personal relationships with any staff member of the office, job applicants for the office, staff member of a public authority oversighted by the Ombudsman, complainants or other members of the public in respect of whom the office is providing services are to be disclosed in accordance with section 4 (Conflicts – private interests and public duties) above
- Staff are not permitted to participate in any decision-making processes with regard to a person with whom they are, or have been, in a close personal relationship, including another staff member (of this office or another public authority), job applicant, or complainant.

11. Self-reporting obligations

The Government Sector Employment Regulation requires you to notify the Ombudsman's office if you are charged with certain offences or if you become bankrupt.

11.1 Criminal offences

You must, as soon as possible (and, in any event, within three working days) notify the Manager People and Culture and the Director Corporate Services in writing if you are charged with:

- a 'serious offence', or
- any offence involving dishonesty, or which (if substantiated) may impact your fitness or ability (or perceived fitness or ability) to hold your role or undertake part or all of the inherent requirements of your role.

A 'serious offence' is an offence punishable by imprisonment for 12 months or more (including an offence committed outside NSW that would be an offence if committed in NSW). It is your responsibility, if you are charged with any offence, to check whether it is a 'serious offence' that requires you to report it to your manager.

Following careful consideration, the Ombudsman may suspend a staff member from duty until a criminal charge of this nature has been dealt with.

You must also, as soon as possible (and, in any event, within three working days) notify the Manager People and Culture in writing if you are convicted or found guilty of such an offence.

11.2 Bankruptcy

Clause 10 of the Government Sector Employment Regulation 2014 requires a public service employee to advise their employer if they become bankrupt or make a composition, arrangement or assignment for the benefit of their creditors.

If you become bankrupt or make a composition, arrangement or assignment for the benefit of your creditors, you must report this to the Manager People and Culture.

These events do not prevent you from remaining in employment at the Ombudsman's office with the exception of statutory officers appointed under the Ombudsman Act (see Ombudsman Act s8(4C)(d). Any notification will be kept confidential.

12. Reporting obligations

12.1 Reportable conduct scheme

The Ombudsman is a 'public authority' for the purpose of the Children's Guardian Act 2019. This means that if you become aware of a reportable allegation or a conviction that you consider is a reportable conviction, you must report the matter to the Ombudsman. The Ombudsman must then give the Children's Guardian written notice of the reportable allegation or conviction considered to be a reportable conviction.

For information about the reportable conduct scheme, see <https://ocg.nsw.gov.au/>.

12.2 Risk of significant harm

Any other staff member who, in the course of their duties, receives information that gives them reasonable grounds to suspect or believe that a child or young person, or class of child or young persons, is at risk of significant harm, may report the grounds for that suspicion or belief to the Department of Communities and Justice, in accordance with section 24 of the Children and Young Persons \(Care and Protection\) Act 1998 \(CYP Act\). Before doing so, staff should contact their manager so that they are aware that a report is being made and the information to be reported.

The secrecy obligations imposed by the Ombudsman Act do not prevent a report from being made. An individual who makes a report or provides information in good faith also has the protection afforded under the CYP Act.

12.3 Child abuse offences

If, in the course of carrying out your functions as an officer or in any other context, you come to know or believe, or ought reasonably come to know, that:

- a. a child abuse offence has been committed against another person, and
- b. you have information that might be of material assistance in securing the apprehension of the offender or the prosecution or conviction of the offender for that offence

you must provide that information to the Police. Failure to do so may amount to a criminal offence under section 316A of the Crimes Act 1900.

12.4 Corrupt conduct

The Ombudsman has an obligation to report to the NSW Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC) any matter that the Ombudsman suspects on reasonable grounds concerns or matters that may concern corrupt conduct under section 11 of the Independent Commission Against Corruption Act \(1988\).

Corrupt conduct can be committed by either a public official or a private individual because it includes conduct that might adversely affect the exercise of official conduct by public officials.

You must use this briefing note form when referring an allegation of corrupt conduct to the Ombudsman. The register of all referrals made by the Ombudsman may only be accessed by the Ombudsman, Chief Operating Officer, Chief Deputy Ombudsman, Legal Counsel, and Governance and Risk.

See also the office's Fraud and Corruption Control Policy.

12.5 Serious indictable offences

If, in the course of carrying out your functions as an officer, or in any other context, you come across information that leads you to know or believe that:

- a. a 'serious indictable offence' (an offence that is punishable by imprisonment for five or more years) has occurred, and
- b. you have information that might be of material assistance in securing the apprehension of the offender or the prosecution or conviction of the offender for that offence

you must provide that information to the Police. Failure to do so may amount to a criminal offence under section 316 of the Crimes Act 1900. Before doing so, staff should contact their manager so that they are aware that a report is being made and the information to be reported.

See also the office's Fraud and Corruption Control Policy.

12.6 WHS incidents

You must report all WHS incidents as soon as reasonably practicable to your manager, Business Partner Safety and Wellbeing, and Manager People and Culture. These notifications may be shared with the WHS Committee and the Executive.

The office has a duty to immediately notify SafeWork NSW of a 'notifiable incident' and to notify the insurer within 48 hours.

See also the office's WHS Policy.

12.7 Cyber security incidents and data breaches

You must report all cyber security incidents as soon as reasonably practicable to your manager and IT Helpdesk. These notifications may be shared with the ICT Subcommittee and the Executive.

The office may report cyber security incidents to another government department and Cyber Security NSW according to the office's Cyber Security Policy.

You must report all data breaches to your manager and Governance and Risk in accordance with the office's Data Breach Policy using this form. These notifications may be shared with the Executive.

The office may need to report data breaches to the NSW Information and Privacy Commission.

12.8 Breaches of the Code

If you see another officer act in a way that is contrary to the Code, you must report the incident to your supervisor, manager, or relevant Executive.

If you believe certain conduct is not just unethical, but may also be corrupt, a serious and substantial waste of government resources, serious maladministration or a breach of government information and privacy rights, then report your concerns to one of the office's PID disclosure officers.

13. Roles and responsibilities

13.1 Ombudsman

The Ombudsman is responsible for:

- leading and promoting the Code within the office
- ensuring the general conduct and management of the functions and activities of the office are in accordance with the core values of the NSW government sector and the office
- approving amendments to the Code.

13.2 Chief Operating Officer

The Chief Operating Officer is responsible for:

- overseeing the implementation of systems and processes that support adherence to the Code
- through Governance and Risk, monitoring compliance with the Code
- approving the appropriate disposal of surrendered gifts and benefits in accordance with the Code.

13.3 Officers

Officers are responsible for:

- understanding and abiding by the Code
- taking refresher training about the Code requirements when and as directed
- declaring all actual, perceived or potential conflicts, secondary employment and gifts and benefits
- understanding legislation and office policies and procedures that support professional and ethical behaviour, and demonstrating those behaviours
- seeking assistance from a manager when unsure of what behaviour or action is expected
- promoting the Code through demonstrating ethical and professional behaviour
- reporting possible breaches of the Code to relevant officers.

13.4 Managers and Executive

Members of the Executive and managers that supervise officers are also responsible for:

- leading, modelling and promoting implementation of the Code and ethical, fair and professional conduct within the office
- ensuring office culture, practices and systems conform with the Code
- ensuring relationships with suppliers and other contractors remain on a professional footing
- documenting, implementing and monitoring strategies and actions that may assist in preventing breaches of the Code, including but not limited to:
 - ensuring that conflicts are avoided or effectively managed
 - ensuring officers have been issued with the Code and understand its requirements
 - ensuring staff complete all necessary training on the Code and associated policies.

13.5 Manager People and Culture

The Manager People and Culture is responsible for ensuring training on the Code is included in Induction for new starters.

13.6 Governance and Risk Unit

The Governance and Risk Unit is responsible for:
